Regarding the former CEO's shareholding in Arabtec of 28.8%, Al Qubaisi commented "any matter related to any shareholder in the Company is considered a decision of the relevant shareholder only, whether the shareholder decides to sell or to keep his shares this will not affect Arabtec since Arabtec is a public joint stock company. We are looking to achievements, projects and to secure the best turnover, and, and shareholders and their shares in the Company are changeable and not controlled by the executive management of the Company or the Board of Directors and have no effect on the Company's strength and financial position".

On the other hand, Al Qubaisi confirmed that there is a strategic relationship between "Aabar" & "Arabtec", defeating the rumors about lack of support provided by "Aabar".

"Aabar deals with projects on a profitability basis and it awards tenders as per its stipulated conditions and requirements, whether such projects were awarded to Arabtec or any other company. This was the situation in the past and it will remain the same.
